Overview

Maternal Mental Health NOW welcomes your partnership at our 2026

Conference: Whose Evidence? Converging Clinical & Community Pathways in Perinatal Mental Health Care, a specialized in-person conference for birthworkers, providers and clinicians in the Los Angeles County area and around the country.

This two-day continuing education training will explore the dynamic relationship between EBPs and community facing practices that support healing in perinatal mental health care.

We anticipate 200 healthcare professionals participating in this educational opportunity, including therapists, clinical psychologists, social workers, community health workers, counselors, nurses (neonatal, labor and delivery, maternity, NICU), midwives, nurse practitioners, physicians (psychiatrists, OB/GYNs, pediatricians, neonatologists, family practitioners, general practitioners, primary care physicians), lactation consultants, health educators, doulas, home visitors, advocates and social anthropologists.

We invite you to learn more about sponsorship benefits, packages and opportunities to thoughtfully engage with training participants—to meet the needs of your organization and align with your strategic goals.

OCT 19 – 20, 2026

Converging Clinical & Community Pathways in Perinatal Mental Health Care

This year's conference centers on the clinical dimensions of perinatal mental health, exploring the diverse range of evidence-based practices and community interventions available to providers. Understanding when and how to apply different approaches is key — from interventions such as Internal Family Systems to community care systems such as doulas to support the birthing person — all are significant protective factors in preventing and addressing perinatal mental health conditions.

Maternal Mental Health NOW's conferences, webinars and trainings are facilitated by leading experts in the field of perinatal mental health and are on the cutting edge of addressing the needs of the birth community.

About Us

MATERNAL MENTAL HEALTH NOW grew out of one woman's ordeal. After the birth of her daughter, Kimberly Wong, Esq. suffered from such severe postpartum depression that she wanted to end her life. Despite good healthcare and strong familial and social support, she struggled to find informed help. Kimberly formed a group in 2007 that would become Maternal Mental Health NOW.

WE CENTER historically marginalized and under-resourced birthing people, as they regularly experience the most significant barriers to care.

WE BELIEVE that real support for perinatal mental health has to be addressed at every level. Perinatal mental health affects everything. Infant bonding, medical outcomes, family dynamics, and long-term child development. It can impact whole communities. When it comes to the mental health of LA families, the problems can run deep. That's why we go wide.

Our Work
